Creating a Safe Space

Think – Pair – Share

- You will have 2 minutes to THINK to yourself, in silence.
- Followed by 2 minutes to PAIR with the person next to you.
- Be prepared to SHARE your thoughts with the class.

What would you NOT like to see happen when we talk about love, sex, and relationships? What could go wrong when we talk about these topics?

e.g., Someone's opinion may be laughed at.

Laughing at people's opinions, forcing someone to share when they don't want to, interrupting, not following school rules or listening to instructions etc.

Devise a list of rules that you feel could be implemented in the class so that everyone feels safe, and they have an equal chance to join in.

e.g., Students are not forced to give an opinion.

Right to pass, one person talking at a time, listening to instructions, being respectful, following school rules etc.

Identify at least two resource people in or near the school where you can go for help with any concerns.

Teacher, Year Coordinator

School counsellor/chaplain

Outside agencies such as BeyondBlue, Headspace etc.

Doctor, counsellor, psychologist, hospital

You can write down new words that you hear and learn, or your teacher may ask you to add specific words.

[illegible]

Types of Relationships

What is a relationship?

A relationship is the connection or bond shared between two people.

In the boxes below, list the four different types of relationships and examples of those in your life:

Type: Friends

Definition: someone close, with whom you have a mutual connection.

Examples of people in your life:

Type: Family

Definition: related by blood or marriage.

Examples of people in your life: mum, dad, siblings, grandparents, aunty, uncle, cousins etc.

Type: Romantic

Definition: someone close, with whom you have strong, romantic feelings for.

Examples of people in your life: boyfriend/girlfriend, husband/wife etc.

Type: Acquaintance

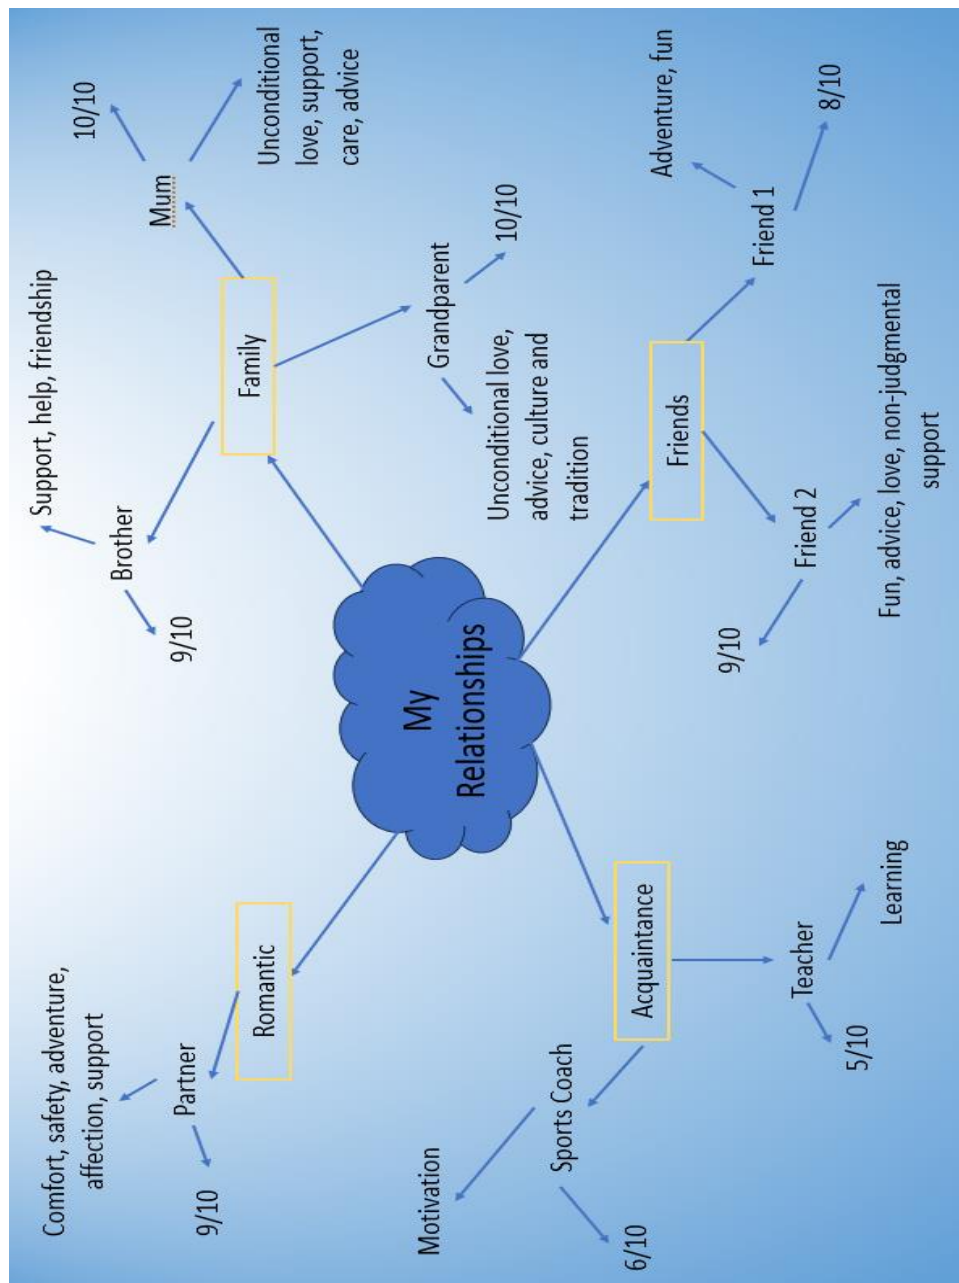

Definition: a person one knows but is not a close companion.

Examples of people in your life: local barista, coach, doctor, teacher, friend of a friend etc.

Your Spider-web of Relationships

In the space below or on a blank piece of paper, create a mind map of all the different relationships you have in your life.

- Branching off each type of relationship, write people in your life who fit in with that type.
- For each person you have a relationship with, further branch off how that person fits into your life:
 - How important is that relationship --> 1 (not very important) - 10 (very important)
 - What does that person/that relationship offer you? (E.g., comfort, stability, adventure, love, frustration etc.)

Relationship Qualities

Healthy vs. Unhealthy

The relationships we have in our life can serve us in different ways. They can be healthy, positive, and beneficial, or they can be unhealthy, negative, and toxic.

While watching the video, consider what you think are healthy qualities in a relationship and unhealthy qualities and write them into the table below. After the video, add any qualities you believe to be missing.

Healthy Relationship Qualities	Unhealthy Relationship Qualities
• Open Communication • Trust • Equality • Honesty • Common interests • Reflection • Mutual Respect • Belief in each other • Support • Enjoy personal time	• Lack of Communication • Cheating • Only spend time with person • No Trust • Jealousy • One sided argument • Inequality • Fear • Controlling

Reflection: Significant Relationships

Some relationships are more significant than others, and relationships can change over time due to personal circumstances, or be affected by outside influences such as family, peers, culture, religion etc.

Reflect on your relationships and answer the questions below:

1. List and name the type of important relationships you have.

2. Which are your most important relationships and why?

3. Do you think these may change over time? Why/why not?

4. How do you think relationships differ when we are 20 vs. 35 vs 70 years old?

#That'sNotLove

Healthy

A healthy relationship means both you and your partner are:

- Communicating
- Respectful
- Trusting
- Honest
- Equal
- Enjoying personal time away from each other
- Making mutual choices
- Economic/financial partners

Unhealthy

You may be in an unhealthy relationship if your partner is:

- Not communicating
- Disrespectful
- Not trusting
- Dishonest
- Trying to take control
- Only spending time together
- Pressured into activities
- Unequal economically

Abusive

Abuse is occurring in a relationship when one partner is:

- Communicating in a hurtful or threatening way
- Mistreating
- Accusing the other of cheating when it's untrue
- Denying their actions are abusive
- Controlling
- Isolating their partner from others

Tips for a Healthy Relationship

One study found that couples who were more generous—even in small ways—were much more likely to report being “very happy” with their relationship.

5:1 - The ratio of positive to negative interactions for happy couples.

Couples who share joy—such as responding excitedly to good news—typically have a stronger relationship and more intimacy.

These positive interactions include signs of affection, interest, joy or humor.

Kindness—making a partner feel validated and loved—is another strong predictor of marital success.

One study found that trying new activities together can help “reignite sparks” in a relationship.

One survey found that stronger knowledge of a partner's preferences improved happiness.

Meaningful and positive communication is the top factor in determining marital happiness.

Love, Sex and Relationships – Ethical Framework

There are several elements that must be in place for any relationship decision to be ethical, fair, safe, and compassionate for all parties involved.

1. Taking Care of ME

This means asking...

Is this what I really want to do?

Am I safe emotionally and physically?

Is the other person treating me with respect and concern?

2. Taking Care of YOU

This means asking...

How does what I want effect the other person?

How do I know?

I've got to check if they are OK with the decision.

2. Having an EQUAL say

This means asking...

Do we have equal power, or is one person getting their way most of the time?

When it comes to sex, a person owns their body and has the right to control who has pleasure from it.

4. Learning as we go

This means asking...

What would have made the situation better?

What am I doing?

What am I not doing?

What can I learn from this?

Love, Sex and Relationships – Ethical Framework

Relationship Scenarios

For each scenario, discuss which qualities of a good/healthy relationship exist or which qualities of a poor/unhealthy relationship exist. Determine if aspects of the framework are being met in each relationship and determine why/why not.

Scenario 1: Hannah, Andrew, and Megan

Hannah's best friend, Megan, has been going out with Andrew. Hannah thinks Megan is obsessed about Andrew. While Hannah and Megan were hanging out watching movies together, Megan kept looking at her phone. Megan knew Andrew was hanging out with his friends and she was upset Andrew hadn't texted her once all night and it was already 9:00 pm. Megan wanted to text Andrew and ask why he hadn't texted her.

Relationship Qualities:

Unhealthy – lack of trust from Megan about Andrew, obsessive in wanting to know his every move/unhealthy attachment.

Aspects of the framework which are being met:

Taking care of me – Megan only because she is only thinking about her emotions.

Taking care of you – neither has checked in and decided on how to tackle this scenario.

Having an equal say – not being met as Andrew may appear to have all the power as he hasn't considered what Megan may want from him when he is out.

Learning as we go – this aspect needs work as they should have a conversation about expectations.

Scenario 2: Justine and Maddie

Justine really likes Maddie. At first Justine thought it was cool that Maddie wanted to spend lots of time with her. She is always waiting at her locker every morning and when she gets out of class. Lately she started showing up at her soccer practice and waits for practice to end so they can walk home together. Maddie always lets her choose the movies that they go to, and she'll watch her play online games for hours. What should Justine do?

Relationship Qualities:

Healthy – really like each other.

Unhealthy – lack of alone time, Maddie is always letting Justine do what she wants (pick the movie) and doesn't appear to have any independence.

Aspects of the framework which are being met:

Taking care of me/Taking care of you – both should have a conversation about what they want from each other. Justine may want more space because Maddie always being there is a lot for her.

Learning as we go – this needs to be improved through conversation.

Scenario 3: Jacob and Dean

Jacob and Dean have been hanging out together lately, after school and sometimes on weekends. One day, while they were alone together, Dean put his head on Jacob's shoulder. Then he put his arm around him and there was a lot of body contact. A week later when Dean was flirt texting with him, Jacob told him that he couldn't "reciprocate" his feelings! Dean ignored Jacob for the next week. Then he started texting him again with flirty texts. Jacob doesn't know what to do.

Relationship Qualities:

Unhealthy – unhealthy attachment to someone who does not reciprocate feelings, ignoring someone and then not respecting their wishes.

Aspects of the framework which are being met:

Dean is not respecting what Jacob wants and what Jacob has asked for. A conversation needs to be had around boundaries etc.

Scenario 4: Ana and Chris

Ana is totally in love with Chris. Chris is Ana's first boyfriend and her first sexual partner. She feels like she doesn't need anyone else in her life at all. He cares about her and gives her everything that she wants. He gives her clothes, presents, buys all her drinks when they go out. He's got his own place so basically; she lives there now. She feels totally safe and cared for. She fancies him loads and likes having sex with him – she feels like she'd do anything for him. He's been so lovely to her.

Ana's friends are really worried about her. She refuses to see them anymore and they think this is because Chris won't let her. She's not looking very well, and they think that this guy is basically just using her. They feel like they can't say anything because Ana will accuse them of just being jealous or not wanting her to be happy.

Ana is not Chris's first 'girlfriend'. In fact, she's not the only person that he is having sex with, but she doesn't need to know about that. He thinks that she's pretty and she'll basically do whatever he wants in bed. She never talks to her mum, and she doesn't see her friends anymore – he told her not to and she'll do anything he says now. He can go off and do his own thing and he know that she'll be there for him when he gets back. He's happy, she's happy with it: what's the problem?

Relationship Qualities:

Chris appears to have power over Ana. Ana has an unhealthy attachment to Chris and is neglecting her other relationships.

Aspects of the framework which are being met:

Taking care of me –

Taking care of you –

Having an equal say –

Learning as we go –

Rights and Responsibilities in Relationships

What is a right?

Something you are entitled to, what everyone deserves.

What is a responsibility?

Something that you are obliged to do or are accountable for.

Just like human rights, there are basic rights and responsibilities we are entitled to within our relationships. When establishing new relationships, it is important to have a clear idea of your own and the other person's expectations.

In the following scenarios, discuss the rights and responsibilities that you have:

1. Parent/Child relationship

Rights	Responsibilities

2. Teacher/Student relationship

Rights	Responsibilities

3. Best Friend relationship

Rights	Responsibilities

4. Sibling relationship

Rights	Responsibilities

5. Romantic/Intimate relationship

Rights	Responsibilities

What were the most common?

Rights	Responsibilities

Healthy or Unhealthy – what do you see?

While watching the videos, write down what qualities you see that represent healthy and unhealthy relationships:

‘Safe Haven’ – video clip
Healthy Qualities/Behaviours:	Unhealthy Qualities/Behaviours: Physical abuse and stalking. She is afraid of her ex-partner and has tried to change her identity to get away from him. She is scared to do certain things out of fear that he will lash out.
‘Friends’ – Monica and Chandler
Healthy Qualities/Behaviours: Both talked about it together, no one raised their voice, and they were able to sort out their conflict.	Unhealthy Qualities/Behaviours: Chandler making assumptions without properly communicating.

Relationship Expectations

In the table below, in the left column consider your TOP 10 qualities or behaviours you expect in any type of relationship.

After working and discussing in small groups, list down what you hope to gain from having a romantic relationship in the column on the right.

My TOP 10 qualities I EXPECT in any of my relationships:	What I hope to gain from having a romantic partner (TOP 5):

Abuse

Abuse is when one person tries to dominate or control someone they are in close contact with.

Types of Abuse:

Physical, emotional, sexual, verbal, financial, social, stalking, spiritual, image-based.

Abuse is not limited to, but can involve:

Violence, intimidation, threats, insults or psychological manipulation.

Abuse can be performed by:

A partner or ex-partner, a carer or guardian, a family member, or anyone who is in close contact with another person.

People from all walks of life can be in an abusive relationship. Abusive relationships affect men, women or children, people in heterosexual or in same-sex relationships and people from any culture, ethnic group, or religion.

Signs of an abusive relationship may include (dot point at least 5 examples):

- frequently insults and ridicules them, puts them down or humiliates them.
- ignores their feelings, opinions, thoughts or choices.
- controls what they do, where they go and who they see.
- is excessively jealous.
- threatens to hurt them, people close to them, their pets or themselves.
- threatens to take their children away or uses children against them.
- is violent, aggressive or forces them to do sexual things against their will.
- blames them for their own poor behaviour or unhappiness.
- limits their access to money, the phone or car.
- threatens to 'out' them to their family, friends, or employer.

Expert Groups – Types of Abuse

You will be working in groups of 5. Each group member will become an expert on a different type of abuse. You will go away, become an expert, and then return to your group and share your information. By the end of this activity, each group member will have shared their information, and everyone will have filled in the boxes below.

The information you need to come away with is a definition and examples of each type of abuse.

1. Physical Abuse

Physical abuse happens when a person uses physical force against another person.

Physical abuse can start slowly and inconspicuously, for example with throwing an object or a slap, and get more intense or worse over time. A person can experience many different types of physical abuse.

Physical abuse includes shaking, slapping, pushing, punching or scratching, kicking, spitting or biting, trying to strangle or choke, using weapons, driving dangerously, destroying property and throwing things, abuse of children or pets, locking someone out of their house or in the house, sleep and food deprivation, forced feeding, physical restraint e.g., pinning against the wall or bed.

2. Verbal Abuse

Verbal abuse is a key feature of emotionally abusive relationships.

The perpetrator consistently makes statements that negatively label a person.

This has a serious impact on the self-esteem and confidence of the person experiencing the verbal abuse. Signs of verbal abuse include angry yelling, but it also includes cold statements designed to humiliate a person, name-calling, continuous criticism, swearing and humiliation in public or in private, attacks on someone's intelligence, body or parenting, yelling.

3. Emotional Abuse

Emotional abuse does not leave physical scars, but it can have a big impact on a person's mental health and wellbeing. Someone experiencing emotional abuse can feel anxious, depressed, and even suicidal.

Perpetrators of emotional abuse use it to take away a person's independence, confidence, and self-esteem. This helps the perpetrator maintain power and control in the relationship. Physically abusive relationships often include aspects of emotional abuse. The signs of emotional abuse can be difficult to identify, especially because it is non-physical blaming a partner for all the problems in a relationship, constantly comparing them with others to undermine their self-esteem and self-worth, intentionally embarrassing them in public, name calling, yelling, insulting or swearing at them, telling them what to wear, preventing them from seeing their friends and family, stalking, threatening suicide.

4. Financial Abuse

Financial abuse can be subtle, with a perpetrator gradually taking control over bank accounts and financial transactions. Financial abuse can also be obvious, violent, and threatening. For example, someone may forbid their partner from working or spending their wages.

Financial abuse includes someone taking complete control of finances and money, restricting access to bank accounts, providing an inadequate allowance and monitoring what their partner spends money on, forbidding a partner to work, taking a partner's pay and not allowing them to access it, preventing them from getting to work by taking their keys or car, identity theft to secure credit, using their credit card without their permission, refusing to work or contribute to household expenses.

5. Sexual Abuse

Sexual abuse is any form of forced or unwanted sexual activity.

The perpetrator of sexual abuse may use physical force, make threats, or take advantage of a person unable to give consent. Sexual abuse mainly happens between people who know each other and can occur in the context of domestic violence. Sexual abuse has impacts on a person's physical and emotional health. It can lead to long-term mental health issues, including anxiety and post-traumatic stress disorder. Sexual abuse includes rape, deliberately causing pain during sex, assaulting the genitals, forced sex without protection against pregnancy or sexually transmitted infections (STIs).

Types of Abuse – further information

Below is further information on other types of abuse:

Social abuse:

Perpetrators of social abuse prevent a person from spending time with family and friends and participating in social activities. By isolating them from their support networks, the perpetrator is attempting to assert power and control. Without a network of friends and family for support, a person can find it very difficult to leave an abusive relationship.

Social abuse can include monitoring someone's phone calls and emails, deciding which friends and family members your partner can talk to and spend time with, and continuously criticising your partner's friends and family.

Stalking:

Stalking happens when a person intentionally and persistently pursues someone against their will. The stalker does this to control, intimidate and create fear in the person they are stalking. The person being stalked may feel like they are in danger.

Stalking limits a person's freedom and makes them feel they have lost control over their lives. Some people who have been stalked are forced to change their lives, including by moving house and changing jobs. Anyone can be a victim of stalking. Perpetrators include current or former partners, relatives, and strangers. In Australia, stalking is a crime.

Stalking involves a pattern of strange or suspicious incidents. To control, intimidate and create fear in a person, a stalker may make repeated phone calls, send numerous text messages, or loiter outside or near a person's home or work.

Spiritual abuse:

Spiritual abuse is the denial or use of spiritual or religious beliefs and practices to control and dominate a person. Spiritual abuse can impact on a someone's self-esteem and confidence, make them feel guilty, damage their spiritual experiences, and isolate them.

Spiritual abuse can happen as part of domestic violence and alongside other types of abuse, for example physical abuse, emotional abuse, financial abuse, and sexual abuse.

Spiritual abuse includes preventing someone from practicing their religion, misusing spiritual or religious beliefs and practices to justify other types of abuse and violence.

Image-based abuse:

Image-based abuse is when someone shares, or threatens to share, intimate photos without the consent of the person in the photo.

Image-based abuse includes photos or videos of a nude person, a person whose breasts or genitals are visible, a person engaged in a sex act, a person showering or bathing, 'upskirting' and 'downblousing' (taking photos up someone's skirt or down their top), or a person's face digitally added to a pornographic or sexualised image.

Cycle of Abuse

The cycle of abuse represents the pattern that abuse may occur in. It is made up of 3 components:

1.

Honeymoon Period

- Occurs right after an instance of physical, sexual, or emotional abuse.
- During this time, an abuser will apologize for their behaviour while showing sorrow and promising that the abuse will never happen again.
- They may also place blame on the victim for the episode of abuse or act like the abuse never happened.
- An abuser may express love through gifts and statements during the honeymoon period.
- Both the abuser and the victim may believe that their relationship is now stable and safe, that all abuse is over and will never happen again.
- This part of the cycle of abuse can make it more difficult for a victim to leave the relationship.

Tension Builds

- When the honeymoon period ends, tension will start to build in the relationship.
- An abuser may start getting angry again and making difficult demands.
- They may start breaking promises they made in the honeymoon phase and stop expressing love or affection.
- The victim may start to fear for their safety and give in to the abuser's requests.
- The victim may be extremely careful about what they say or do as tension is building.

3.

Explosion

- Finally, the tension is too much, and the abuser commits an act of abuse.
- Abuse may range from physical abuse, like hitting, to emotional abuse such as name-calling and humiliation.
- The goal of abuse is always to gain power and control over the victim using any means necessary.
- It's important to remember that physical harm is not the only type of abuse. The abuse can take a variety of forms.

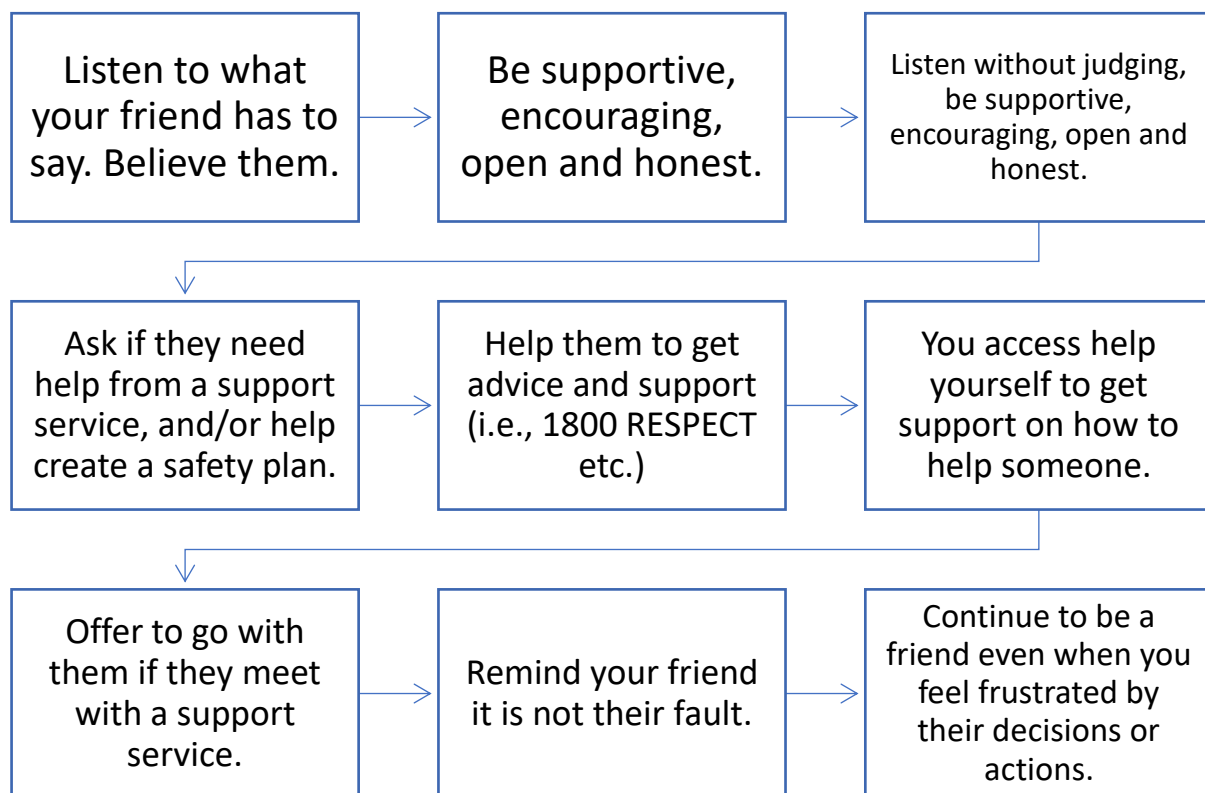

Where to get help?

People often stay in an abusive relationship for longer than they should. Once you know that you are in an abusive relationship, however, you should do something about it.

If you are in immediate danger, call triple zero (000). The police are there to protect you. If you need to get out, you could go to a refuge, a trusted family member or friend.

Ad Campaign Analysis #1

While watching the video, answer the following questions:

1. What types of abuse are shown in this advertisement? Provide examples from the video.

Physical abuse – shown when paper is thrown at another student on the bus.
Refers to emotional abuse – when the girls are sitting in the lounge talking.

2. Describe the cultural attitudes and behaviours that are depicted in the advertisement.

That it is okay to show your emotions, we need to be encouraging of one another, we need to stand up for ourselves and others.

3. Outline the health impact that is shown in the advertisement regarding the potential victim.

All victims look sad – suggests that it can impact their self-esteem and confidence.

4. Overall, what is the message of the ad and the campaign and how does the campaign portray this message in the ad?

That we need to be supportive of each other and stand up for what is right. Teach these attributes to children from a young age so that as they get older, they have these skills in their repertoire.

Portrayed by showing adults comforting young students (allowing them to cry), shows parents helping young children know that they are strong. All of the words/speech in the video are accompanied by scenes of how the action can be done.

Ad Campaign Analysis #2

While watching the video, answer the following questions:

1. What types of abuse are shown in this advertisement? Provide examples from the video.

Physical abuse – shows a young boy pushing past a girl in the museum.

Physical abuse against women – refers to this as the boy says, “when I grow up, I guess it’s okay if I am violent with women.”

2. Describe the cultural attitudes and behaviours that are depicted in the advertisement.

That boys will be boys and they are stereotypically rough, even with girls. This is shown when the mum says to her daughter after the boy has brushed past her “it’s okay, he’s just being a boy.”

Reinforced when the girl says, “it’s okay mum, I know it’s okay for boys to push girls.”

Possibly accepts the concept that if a boy likes a girl, he is mean to her.

3. Outline the health impact that is shown in the advertisement regarding the potential victim.

Potential injury due to physical abuse.

4. Overall, what is the message of the ad and the campaign and how does the campaign portray this message in the ad?

To teach young people from a young age that violence and disrespect against anyone is not okay. This is shown in the ad at the end when the writing comes across the screen “are you teaching them disrespect?” This is reinforced at the end when the “Violence Against Women Let’s Stop It At The Start” slogan comes up.

That we shouldn’t allow violence and disrespectful behaviour and we should correct it – this is shown when the mum says “sorry, that’s not what I meant” with a concerned look on her face. This scene suggests that we shouldn’t allow it from the start and shouldn’t make up excuses for poor behaviours.

Pressures to be Sexually Active

Individually answer the questions below and be prepared to share your responses:

List 5 reasons young people decide to have sexual intercourse and engage in sexual behaviours:

Curious.
To fit in.
Everyone is doing it.
Pressured by a partner.
Under the influence.
In love.
Enjoyment.

List 5 reasons why young people may choose to postpone sexual intercourse/sexual behaviours:

Religion.
Not ready or scared.
Personal choice/preference.
Not in love/don't have a partner/not in a relationship.
Previous trauma/negative experiences.
Don't want to get in trouble.
Don't want to get pregnant or contract an STI.
Don't know how to be safe.

What are some considerations that couples need to discuss prior to sex?

Consent and if it is what they both want.
How to be safe – contraception and protection.
Potential consequences and risks.
How will it affect their relationship?

Chris and Sam – Love, Sex, and Relationships Ethical Framework

Read the story about Chris and Sam below. Analyse the story and use the Love, Sex, and Relationships Ethical Framework to suggest what they should do and how each element of the framework applies.

Sam has never had a boyfriend, although she has kissed a few boys. Everything changed when she met Chris at a party. He is a few years older than her and while they aren't officially boyfriend/girlfriend (although she would like it to be), they have been with each other a few times now. She is a bit obsessed with him and can't get him out of her mind.

There's a party on tonight and he's texted her a few times to see if she'll be there. She feels both excited and nervous. She'd definitely like to be with him again, but she doesn't want to go too far. The first time she was with him, he tried a few times to slip his hand in her jeans, but she didn't let him. It's got so heavy so fast, and he seems to expect a lot. She knows he's had plenty of girlfriends and she's flattered that he wants to be with her.

Chris is looking forward to seeing Sam tonight. She's got this way of talking that he loves, and she is hot. He's had quite a few girlfriends. He's had a lot of sex. He knows she hasn't been with many (any?) guys, but he'll keep trying.

Chris and Sam get together at the party. They are finally alone. They are out in his car. Her shirt is off. Her jeans are down. She's gone further than she'd planned but it was hard to stop because it felt so good. But now she wants to stop. He keeps trying for sex and she wants to stop.

What happens next?

Using the Love, Sex, and Relationships Ethical Framework assess the situation and come up with a reasonable ending:

Chris and Sam should...

Because:

Taking care of me:

Taking care of you:

Waiter – Selector Food Activity

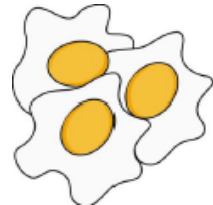

Working in pairs – one person is the waiter; the other is the selector.

Selector:

- In your workbook, rank the foods from 1 (most favourite) to 10 (least favourite).
- You cannot speak, point or indicate anything.
- You can gesture and use other non-verbal communication when answering the waiter's questions.

Waiter:

- Ask the selector questions about their food choices and try and uncover their order of food order preferences.
- You cannot ask questions such as “is chocolate your number 1?”

Non-verbal Communication

Waiter-Selector Food Activity Debrief:

1. What strategies were used to convey a message? How did you get your answer across?

Things like facial expression, body language and gestures.

2. Were there any mixed messages? Why?

Misunderstanding and misinterpretation.

3. In a sexual negotiation, what cues might be used if a person did not want to oblige?

Pulling or pushing away.
Squirming.
Facial expressions.

4. Why do you think there are times when people ignore the non-verbal cues, or persist even when they suspect someone is uncertain?

Misunderstanding, misinterpretation, caught up in the moment, it was fine last time etc.

It is unethical and may be illegal to go ahead/continue with sex if one party is not giving consent.

Consent is a Conversation

Watch the video 'Consent is a Conversation' with Clementine Ford. What important concepts about consent are discussed?

1. Use clear descriptions – metaphors can make understanding harder.
2. Consent isn't difficult to understand.
3. If you're confused, just ask – if it's not an enthusiastic yes, then it's a no.
4. Consent can be withdrawn at any time, no explanation required.
5. Consent is an ongoing conversation.
6. Consent equals respect.

Consent is an agreement made or permission given without coercion, such as without force, threats, manipulation, or intimidation. It involves and is impacted by giving and receiving, negotiation, verbal and non-verbal cues, power, control, coercion, legal requirements, and the impact of intoxication.

When can consent not be given?

To consent to having sex, a person needs to be old enough (over the legal age of consent) and must freely agree to the sexual activity.

Everyone who is old enough has the right to freely decide if they want to have sex or not.

When can consent NOT be given?

Are under the legal age of consent (16 years old).

Under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

Asleep.

Have been forced, tricked or threatened into the act.

Consent to sexual activity

Consensual sex is when both parties are of legal age, agree to engage in intercourse by choice, and have the freedom and capacity to make that choice. This means agreeing to sexual relations without fear, coercion, force or intimidation. Giving consent is active, not passive. It means freely choosing to say 'yes' and also being free to change your mind at any time.

In Western Australia, the legal age for males and females to consent to sexual activity is 16 years of age. If you have sex with someone who is under 16 years of age it is a crime.

It is also a crime to have a sexual relationship with someone under 18 years of age if you have a relationship of authority with them, for example, you are their teacher or employer.

If someone is not able to give consent to sex, regardless of their age, it is a crime to have a sexual relationship with them. People who cannot give consent are those who are:

- > unconscious, asleep, intoxicated, drugged, or otherwise unable to say 'yes'
- > have a psychological or decision-making disability that impacts on their ability to understand what they are consenting to.

Examples – none of these people consented

- > "I've been going out with this guy for a few months. He wanted me to have sex with him but I wasn't ready. He started to shout and get really angry. I gave in to him because I was so scared."
- > "My husband and I separated six months ago. I still see him because of the children. Recently he came to the house, forced me into the bedroom and had sex with me."
- > "I was at a party and had too much to drink. I fell asleep on a spare bed. I woke up with someone I didn't know having sex with me."

Zoe and Sam, a story.

Zoe, aged 16.

I'll never forget that night as long as I live. Sam and I had been going out for a while and he had always acted like a really sweet guy – well, we had done some kissing and fooling around but he never gave me any reason not to trust him.

The night of the party I wore this gorgeous dress that I borrowed from my sister. It was a bit showier than the clothes I normally wear but I thought it was very flattering.

At the party I had some beer and it made me really tired, so I wanted to lie down. Maybe I shouldn't have suggested we both lie down together but it felt weird to just go upstairs by myself and leave Sam all alone. The next thing I know he's all over me, forcing me to have sex with him. It was horrible. I didn't want to scream and make a fool of myself with all those other people in the next room. I tried to fight him off, but he was too strong. Needless to say, I never want to see Sam again. He seemed like such a nice guy. What happened?

Sam, aged 17.

I still don't understand what happened. Zoe and I had been seeing each other for about two months and although we hadn't slept together yet, I had made it pretty clear that I was very attracted to her and eventually expected to have sex with her.

We were supposed to go to a party and when she showed up in this sexy low-cut dress, I thought maybe it was her way of saying she was ready.

At the party we drank some beer, which made her sort of sleepy and sensual. When she said she wanted to go lie down and wanted me to come and snuggle with her, what was I supposed to think? Of course, I thought she wanted to have sex. She did grumble a bit when I started to undress her, but I just thought she wanted to be persuaded. Lots of women feel a bit funny about being forward and they want men to take responsibility for sex. I don't know.

We had sex and it was fine. I took her home from the party and I thought everything was ok. But ever since then she refuses to talk to me or go out with me. I thought she really liked me. What happened?

In relation to the story above about Zoe and Sam, answer the questions below:

In that moment in the story, what could Zoe have said to Sam to express what she's thinking and feeling to make him stop?

Asked him to stop and say, "I'm not comfortable" or "I'm not ready for this."
Asked him just to lay there together.
Said "I'm tired, I just want to rest."

What would have stopped Zoe from speaking up? What got in the way of her expressing her feelings?

Didn't want to make a scene or embarrass herself.
Fear from him getting angry or negatively impacting their relationship.
That maybe he might dump her if she didn't go through with it.
She was under the influence of alcohol.
She assumed he was a nice guy.
Some self-blame – "maybe I shouldn't have suggested we both lie down together."

What non-verbal signs was Zoe giving to say she was uncomfortable?

Tried to fight him off.
Grumbled.

What could Sam have said to Zoe to check what was going on with her?

Do you like...?
Do you want to...?
Can I...?
How about we...?
Would you like to...?

What makes it difficult for Sam to say these things?

Ego
Embarrassed
Fear of rejection

Risks of..... Asking for consent as Sam	Risks of..... Not asking for consent as either person	Risks of..... Asking for consent as Zoe
• No real risks.	• Sexual assault. • Someone may feel unsafe or uncomfortable. • Could cause tension in their relationship. • May instil fear. • May impact their reputation. • Opportunity for misunderstandings.	• No real risks. • He might get angry because she asked, especially if they have done minor sexual behaviours in the past.

21 ways to ask for consent

- Do you want to have sex?
- How far do you want to go?
- What sounds like fun?
- What do you want to do?
- How does that feel?
- What do you want right now?
- What would turn you on?
- Can I touch you here?
- Are you sure you want to do this?
- Can I help you out of that?
- Do you want to cuddle?
- Do you want me to keep going?
- Do you want me to put on a condom?
- Do you want me to stop?
- Can we try something new?
- How do you feel about...?
- What excites you?
- What do you like?
- Want more?
- Is that good?
- Are you horny?

CAN I?

The CAN I acronym can be used to ensure that a situation is consensual. Use the PowerPoint to fill in the gaps below:

C Consent Has Been Given

Consent is not just a YES or a NO. It's about the person you are going to have sex with wanting it the whole time that you are having sex. Some ways to ask for consent include:

I want to _____.
Do you want me to ____?
Do you want to try ____?
What do you like?

A Actions Are Consistent With Words

How many times have you said yes and meant no? Did you commit to something you didn't want to do? During sex, sometimes we say things in the moment that cannot be taken back. Making sure your partner's actions are consistent with their words is key to having good sex.

Speaking words of encouragement
Are they participating as much as you are? Kissing you? Touching you?

N No Pressure

Just because one person wants something at one time, doesn't mean that we all do. Remember that you and your partner have the right to good, voluntary sex.

It's OK if you or someone else don't want to have sex.
It's OK if you don't want to try something unfamiliar.
It's OK to pause, take a break, slow down, and stop.
It's OK to say yes sometimes and say no other times.
It's OK to say what you like, and what you don't like.

I I Ask

Checking in with your partner throughout sex is necessary to ensure that the entire time is enjoyable for everyone. Consent doesn't need to be boring! Check-in by asking:

Do you like that?
Does that feel good?
Is this okay?
Tell me what you want next.
Do you want it?

How can I lower my risk of sexual assault?

Use the following words to fill in the gaps:

Fuel	Hitch-hike	Alone
Streets	Aware	Drink
Charge	Confidence	Lit
Jogging	Lock	Assertive
Locking	Instincts	Isolated

Be aware of your surroundings – who is out there and what's going on.

Walk with confidence - the more confident you look, the stronger you appear.

Know your limits when it comes to using drugs and alcohol.

Be assertive - don't let anyone violate your space or body.

Trust your instincts - if you feel uncomfortable in your surroundings, leave.

Don't prop open self-locking doors.

lock your doors and windows when leaving your house/apartment.

Be wary of isolated spots, like underground garages, offices, laundry rooms especially after hours.

Avoid walking or jogging alone, especially at night.

Stay in well - lit areas at night.

Have your keys in reach – be ready to enter the house or car quickly.

Drive on well traveled streets, and try and not to drive alone in these areas.

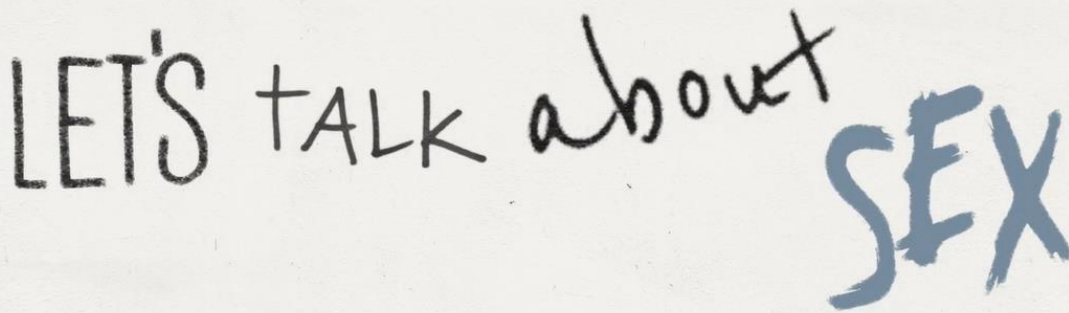

Keep your car in good shape with enough fuel.

Have enough charge and credit on your phone.

Never hitch-hike or pick up hitch-hikers.

Don't leave your drink, otherwise, ditch it!

LET'S TALK about
SEX

Sex & Consent Laws in Western Australia

WA has laws to protect us all when it comes to sex and consent.

Do the laws about consent only apply to having sex?

You must have consent for any kind of sexual activity. This includes kissing, touching someone sexually, oral sex and sexual penetration of the vagina or anus with any body part or object.

There are serious consequences for engaging in sexual activity with someone without consent.

What is consent?

Consent is when you agree to something, or say it is okay. You can do this with words or actions.

Consent must be clear and freely given. You cannot pressure someone, or use lies, threats or force to get them to agree. This is not consent.

Someone does not have to say "no" out loud for them to not consent. If someone turns away from you, pushes your hand away or doesn't respond to your touch, this is not consent.

What if you consent to something, and then change your mind?

Consent is not just one question, it's a conversation, and it can be taken back at any time.

If you continue having sex with someone after they have taken away consent, you are breaking the law.

What if you consented in the past, but you don't want to this time?

Consent on one occasion doesn't mean consent on every occasion in the future, you must check every time.

What if you only consent to some things?

Consent to one type of sexual activity doesn't mean consent to all types of sexual activity.

For example if you agree to kissing and touching, that does not mean you are consenting to oral or penetrative sex.

Can you consent if you are under the influence of drugs or alcohol?

To consent to sexual activity, you must be able to understand what you are agreeing to and communicate this clearly to the other person.

If you are under the influence of drugs or alcohol to the extent that you are unable to do these things, then you are too intoxicated to give consent.

Obviously you cannot give consent if you are passed out or asleep.

What if you are under 16 – can you give consent?

The age you can consent is different around Australia. In WA, you cannot legally consent to sexual activity if you are under the age of 16 years – even if you say “yes”.

It is important to be sure about the other person’s age. If you think they are old enough to give consent and you are wrong, you may still be breaking the law.

What if the age difference between you is less than two years?

In WA it is against the law to engage in sexual activity with someone under the age of 16, regardless of your own age.

In some parts of Australia it is not a crime to have sex with someone who is under 16 if the age difference between you is less than two years. This is not the law in WA.

It is important to be sure about the other person’s age. If you think they are old enough to give consent and you are wrong, you may still be breaking the law.

What if you are both under 16?

If two people under the age of 16 engage in sexual activity, they are both breaking the law and could both be in trouble. The person who is the oldest is the most likely to be charged with a criminal offence. However it is possible both could be charged.

What if you have a special relationship with the other person?

If someone is in a position that gives them power or authority over you, then you must be 18 years of age to give consent to sexual activity with that person. This applies to a relationship with a teacher, coach or guardian.

What can happen if you engage in sexual activity without consent?

If you have sex with someone who does not consent or cannot consent because of their age, you can be charged with sexual penetration without consent (rape).

You can get a criminal record. This is likely to affect your ability to get a job and to travel to other countries.

You can be declared a 'reportable offender' and be placed on the Sex Offender Register for life. This will make it very difficult for you to obtain any kind of employment that involves working with children. There are also very onerous reporting requirements that mean you must let the police know every time you create a new email or social media account, change your address, change the way you look, change jobs or plan to travel.

You can even go to jail.

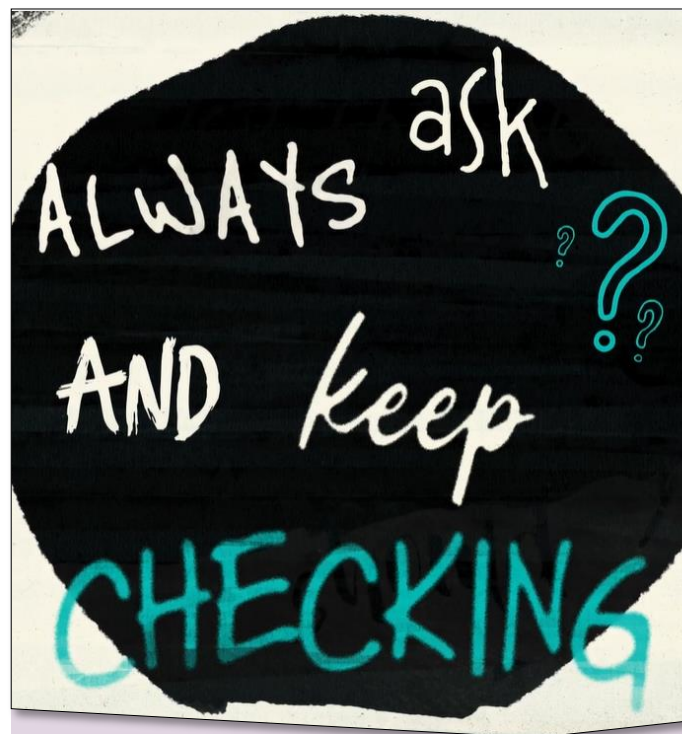

There are no time limits for bringing charges of sexual assault, so it can happen years down the track.

How can you make sure you have consent?

Sex should be between people who are at least 16 years of age or older, and who freely and clearly consent.

If you're not sure, just ask and keep checking that the other person is okay with what you're doing.

Image-based abuse

This fact sheet has information on image-based abuse, intimate images, and the types of sharing that is against the law.

What is Image-based abuse?

Image-based abuse is when you share or threaten to share an intimate image of someone else without their consent.

It is against the law.

You can be charged for making a threat even if you do not have the image or if the image does not exist.

What is an intimate image?

An intimate image is any picture, photo or video that shows a person in a private situation:

- » naked, partially naked, or in their underwear; or
- » undressing, bathing, toileting, or engaging in sexual activity.

This includes real photos, photo-shopped pictures, videos, stories, drawings and cartoons and can be in digital, electronic or printed form.

An image taken in public, like a photo of a person at the beach in their bathers, is not an intimate image.

What about intimate images of young people?

It is against the law to take, keep, share or ask for an intimate image of a young person under the age of 18.

It is against the law even if the young person in the image says that it is okay and even if that young person is you, for example in a selfie.

This is because child pornography laws apply.

It is against the law to share or threaten to share an intimate image of someone else without their consent.

“Child pornography laws apply to images of anyone under 18.”

What is sharing?

Some examples of sharing an intimate image are:

- » posting it to social media,
- » uploading it to a website,
- » displaying it in a public place,
- » texting, emailing, mailing or handing it to someone, and
- » forwarding an image that was first shared by someone else.

“If someone gives you consent to share an intimate image once, that does not automatically mean it is okay to share it again.”

When is it legal to share an intimate image?

It is not against the law to share an image of another person who is over the age of 18 and who freely and voluntarily gives their consent.

Consent means the person in the image says it is okay for you to share it. A person does not give consent if you use force, threaten, scare or trick them into saying you can share the image.

If someone gives you consent to share an intimate image once, or to some people, that does not automatically mean it is okay to share it again. You should check each time.

It is not against the law to share an intimate image of yourself if you are over the age of 18, you are not sending it to anyone under the age of 16, and you are not scaring or harassing anyone.

It is also okay to share an intimate image of someone in circumstances that would be considered reasonable, socially acceptable or in the public interest. For example, if you take a photo of your baby in the bath and send it to a family member, you are unlikely to be charged with an offence.

“Legal Aid WA provides free community legal education on image-based abuse.”

How can Legal Aid WA help?

Legal Aid WA provides free community legal education on image-based abuse through our R U Legal? program. To find out more about the program or to book a presenter, see the R U Legal? page on our website.

“Child pornography laws apply to images of anyone under 18.”

What about intimate images of young people?

It is against the law to take, keep, share or ask for an intimate image of a young person under the age of 18.

It is against the law even if the young person in the image says that it is okay and even if that young person is you, for example in a selfie.

This is because child pornography laws apply.

What is sharing?

Some examples of sharing an intimate image are:

- » posting it to social media,
- » uploading it to a website,
- » displaying it in a public place,
- » texting, emailing, mailing or handing it to someone, and
- » forwarding an image that was first shared by someone else.

“If someone gives you consent to share an intimate image once, that does not automatically mean it is okay to share it again.”

When is it legal to share an intimate image?

It is not against the law to share an image of another person who is over the age of 18 and who freely and voluntarily gives their consent.

Consent means the person in the image says it is okay for you to share it. A person does not give consent if you use force, threaten, scare or trick them into saying you can share the image.

If someone gives you consent to share an intimate image once, or to some people, that does not automatically mean it is okay to share it again. You should check each time.

It is not against the law to share an intimate image of yourself if you are over the age of 18, you are not sending it to anyone under the age of 16, and you are not scaring or harassing anyone.

It is also okay to share an intimate image of someone in circumstances that would be considered reasonable, socially acceptable or in the public interest. For example, if you take a photo of your baby in the bath and send it to a family member, you are unlikely to be charged with an offence.

Increased pressure on family to help the young parents support the child.
Friendships may lack due to not having enough time to spend with them.
Might develop friendships with people from mother's group etc.

LIVELIHOOD/LIFESTYLE

Unable to work or study due to caring for a newborn.
Financial implications of raising a child.
Less freedom.

Options for Parents

There is no doubt that falling pregnant and having a baby can have a big impact on a person's life. But there are still a range of options if the scenario presents itself, planned or unplanned. Alternatively, if a person or couple is unable to fall pregnant, they also have options for if they wish to become parents.

Work in pairs to research and complete the table below. Divide out the work and share your answers to ensure you have all boxes completed.
