

Others: Communication

Chapter

5

1. [8 marks]

(2013:S3:7)

- (a) Outline two features of the 'restricted code' of language identified by Bernstein. [2]

- (b) What is the difference between Bernstein's view of the 'restricted code' and Labov's view of 'Black English Vernacular'? [2]

- (c) Name and describe briefly the gender difference in communication identified by Tannen. [4]

2. [15 marks]

(2016:ATAR:9)

A husband and wife are talking to each other after a day at work.

Wife: I feel so stressed because I am worried that I am not going to get that report finished this week.

Husband: You should delegate some of the work to your team members. When my team had a big report to do, we all contributed and finished it the day before the deadline.

Wife: There's so much to do and I feel so overwhelmed. The rest of the team doesn't have the background knowledge about the project like I do.

Husband: Well, you could ask your boss for an extension until next week.

- (a) (i) Name the communication style shown by the wife according to Tannen's theory, and describe this communication style, using an example from the scenario. [3]

- (ii) According to Tannen's theory, identify how the wife might be feeling at the end of this conversation and provide a reason for your response. [2]

- (iii) According to Tannen's theory, identify how the husband might be feeling at the end of this conversation and provide a reason for your response. [2]

- (b) (i) Name and outline the key component of Chomsky's theory of language development. [2]

- (ii) Outline Bruner's theory of language development and identify how it addressed the major limitation of Chomsky's theory. [3]

- (c) Compare and contrast Bernstein's 'restricted code' and Labov's 'Black English Vernacular'. [3]

3. [15 marks]

(2017:ATAR:9)

Jackson, a health science PhD student, is preparing a presentation about how fast food is contributing to obesity. The presentation is for government officials who are deciding whether to introduce a 'fat tax' on foods that contain large amounts of saturated fat.

- (a) Define what psychologists mean by 'persuasive communication'. [1]

CONTINUED NEXT PAGE

- (b) Name the three features of persuasive communication Jackson should consider when preparing his presentation. [3]

One: _____

Two: _____

Three: _____

- (c) Choose two features of persuasive communication and outline, using examples, how Jackson can use each of them to enhance the persuasiveness of his message. [4]

One: _____

Two: _____

- (d) (i) Name the key theorist associated with the innate theory of language acquisition. [1]

- (ii) Name the key theorist associated with the learned theory of language acquisition. [1]

- (e) (i) Outline three features of the innate theory of language. [3]

One: _____

Two: _____

Three: _____

- (ii) Outline two limitations of the innate theory of language. [2]

One: _____

Two: _____

4. [13 marks]

(2018:ATAR:7)

- (a) Name the theorist who discussed differences in communication based on gender. [1]

- (b) Explain the concept of 'rapport talk' in relation to gender and communication. [2]

- (c) Name and outline two of the ways in which Bruner suggested parents could assist children in learning language. [4]

One: _____

CONTINUED NEXT PAGE

Two: _____

- (d) In the table below, name the two styles of communication outlined by Bernstein. Give an example of how each style could be used for the scenario below and outline how the example demonstrates the style. [6]

Scenario – asking a student to pass the blue pencil

Style name	Example	Demonstrates style

5. [17 marks]

(2019:ATAR:9)

- (a) Define what is meant by 'communication style' [1]

- (b) Other than accents, list two aspects of language that are affected by our communication style. [2]

One: _____

Two: _____

- (c) Describe the 'restricted code' as proposed by Bernstein. [2]

- (d) State the key idea behind Chomsky's theory of language development. [1]

According to Chomsky's theory, the Language Acquisition Device plays a role in language development.

- (e) Explain the concept of the Language Acquisition Device. [3]

The Language Acquisition Device relies on the concept of grammatical rules, both surface structure and deep structure.

- (f) Explain the difference between these two types of grammatical rules. [2]

When it comes to persuasive communication, we must consider three main features: the source of the message, the nature of the communication and the characteristics of the audience.

- (g) Explain two different aspects of 'the source of the message' that increase the likelihood of someone paying attention to the message. [4]

One:

Two: _____

'Nature of the communication' may include the medium (e.g. television, radio, newspaper) used to convey the message.

- (h) Give an example of how the medium used can increase a person's motivation to pay attention to the message. [2]

