Australia Day — celebration or mourning?

Student: Class: Due date:

The First Fleet arrived at Port Jackson on 26 January 1788. That day was — and is still — remembered in many ways and called many things.

1. What message does each of the following names give, and from whose point of view (POV) do you think the name originates?

Name	Message	POV (I – Indigenous E – European)
Anniversary Day
Foundation Day
ANA* Day
Invasion Day
Survival Day
Australia Day (official name from 1935)

*ANA = Australian Natives Association (natives refers to the first generation of Europeans born in Australia)

2. Briefly describe the Day of Mourning protest.

SOURCE 3 The Day of Mourning was the first organised civil rights protest by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. Two of the day's organisers, William Ferguson and Jack Patten, are pictured at far left and right respectively.

SOURCE 5 Following the Day of Mourning, Australia's Indigenous community began publishing its first newspaper, Abo Call, edited by Jack Patten.

To all Aborigines!

'The Abo Call' is our own paper.

It has been established to present the case for Aborigines, from the point of view of the Aborigines themselves.

This paper has nothing to do with missionaries, or anthropologists, or with anybody who looks down on Aborigines as an 'inferior' race.

We are NOT an inferior race, we have merely been refused the chance of education that whites receive. 'The Abo Call' will show that we do not want to go back to the Stone Age.

Representing 60 000 Full Bloods and 20 000 Halfcastes in Australia, we raise our voice to ask for Education, Equal Opportunity, and Full Citizen Rights.

'The Abo Call' will be published once a month. Price 3d [3 pence].

The Editor asks all Aborigines and Halfcastes to support the paper, by buying it and also by acting as agents for sale to white friends and supporters.

DID YOU KNOW?

Racism is based on the belief that a person’s race determines their ability and attributes, and that some people are inherently inferior to others. In the 1930s Hitler invoked racist theories to justify his persecution of the Jewish people. The same theories were used to justify racial segregation in the United States, South Africa and Australia.

Understanding a historical debate

Student: Class: Due date:

In our Australian democratic parliament, the government and the Opposition engage in debate so that each side can argue its case and provide supporting evidence. The media reports these debates and, in various ways, provides opportunities for the wider community to contribute to a debate. These debates contribute to our historical record.

Step 1: Re-read Kevin Rudd's 'sorry speech' in the subtopic Reconciliation.

Step 2: Read the following two extracts. The first is an extensive extract of the opposition's follow-up speech, and the latter is an extract from Daniel Reynaud's 'Saying sorry'.

Step 3: Answer the questions on the following page.

In some cases, government policies evolved from the belief that the Aboriginal race would not survive and should be assimilated. In others, the conviction was that half-caste children in particular should, for their own protection, be removed to government and church-run institutions where conditions reflected the standards of the day. Others were placed with white families whose kindness motivated them to the belief that rescued children deserved a better life.

Our responsibility, every one of us, is to understand what happened here, why it happened, the impact it had not only on those who were removed, but also those who did the removing and supported it.

Our generation does not own these actions, nor should it feel guilt for what was done in many, but not all cases, with the best of intentions. But in saying we are sorry — and deeply so — we remind ourselves that each generation lives in ignorance of the long-term consequences of its decisions and actions. Even when motivated by inherent humanity and decency to reach out to the dispossessed in extreme adversity, our actions can have unintended outcomes. As such, many decent Australians are hurt by accusations of theft in relation to their good intentions.

Source: Extracts from Opposition leader Brendan Nelson's speech, addressing the 42nd Parliament of Australia on 13 February 2008.

Those opposed to an apology forwarded various arguments, including that the intervention was well intentioned, provided better circumstances and opportunities for Indigenous children, and that today's Australians carry no moral responsibility for actions of previous generations. There were also fears that an apology would fuel compensation claims.

And of course, every side in the argument was able to trot out case studies — real lives — that supported their point of view. Evidence was produced of some Aboriginal parents voluntarily surrendering children, and others having their children brutally and forcibly removed.

Some victims spoke with affection of their treatment in welfare or foster homes; others of clinical, harsh institutions and confusion over their loss of identity. Many testimonies told of simultaneously positive and negative experiences: of feeling fortunate to have received a good education in materially comfortable circumstances, while at the same time suffering considerable emotional trauma through enforced isolation from their heritage.

The range of experiences of the so-called stolen generations and the range of attitudes toward them raises questions about saying sorry. What exactly are we saying sorry for? Who is sorry?

Are we responsible for the actions of past generations? Does being sorry involve more than just the words?
