Elective 6: Nazism in Germany

Major Research Task 8 Part A: Historical Inquiry, 30 marks, 10% weighting (total)

Part A: Historical inquiry and essay (3%)

Part B: In-class validation essay (7%)

Select one prominent figure from the following list:

- Adolf Hitler
- Joseph Goebbels
- Hermann Göring
- Leni Riefenstahl

...and research that person's role and contribution in relation to the period of study.

Research/essay question: Assess one significant individual's influence and motivation for events or ideas that they were involved in and explain the significant impact they had on period.

This essay expects you to 'weigh up' or 'evaluate' (assess) the person's role and influence. You are to explore the reasons and motives for their actions. Include reference and discussion of important events from the time period relating to your chosen figure and identify the effects.

Your essay should include:

- A clear introduction that briefly 'sets out' the aim of the essay as well as highlighting the key points of discussion that you intend to make, as well as a brief idea of the nature of each.
- A main body that comprises of a series of paragraphs that address the task, providing detailed information in a logical & flowing manner.
- Paragraphs that focus each on a different key idea or event by providing a brief description (what, where, when, who), an explanation of the factors that caused this, an explanation of the effects (the results), and a brief discussion of the significance of that event in terms of what impact it had on society/ societies: peoples' behaviour; thinking patterns; the major course of events to follow in the long term. Remember, you are informing the reader – help them to understand your topic. Ensure that you use appropriate historical terms and concepts to develop cohesive arguments that are analytical, logical and coherent.
- Suitable conclusion that summarises the key points that you have made in each of your main body paragraphs and explains their importance (significance) to your topic. Discuss the legacy of this person and the actions, ideas and events associated with them; what has resonated through history that can be traced back to this period? Make sure that you make a final statement that directly addresses the set task – that all important key point that your essay is really aiming at

You must also include appropriate bibliography to acknowledge sources. This should be in APA referencing format. Ensure that you select a comprehensive range of sources and analyse each for accuracy, perspective, contestability and omissions.

Reliance on the internet alone is not the expected standard. You should display an ability to research a wider range of sources: library books; encyclopaedias; newspaper articles; magazines; interviews – 'find someone who has lived it' (if possible); DVDs, videos, documentaries; magazines etc.

Your essay must be between 2250 and 2750 (+/- 10% of 2500) words in length (place your word count at the end of the essay). You may present your essay handwritten (this must be neat and legible) or typed using Microsoft Word using Times New Roman, font size 12. Number each page. Include a cover sheet comprising of: a suitable title; the set task; your name; teacher's name; and an appropriate supporting image. Place your name on every page of your assignment.

Ensure that your essay has enough substance and direction; so think about what you aim to write about and where you aim to finish. Provide evidence of your planning (any brainstorm, rough drafts, note taking etc). Ensure that someone else proof reads your essay and you show evidence of editing.

Aim to complete your essay well before the due date, to allow time for unexpected delays.

Due date: Friday Week 3, Term 3 (9th August)

NOTE:

Part B validation assessment in the form of an in-class essay will take place the week after handing in the task (Thursday 15th August), whereby a question will be posed in relation to your research. This will be a closed book assessment, at 7% weighting.

Task 8 Historical enquiry: Hermann Goering

Hermann Göring (or Goering) was born on January 12, 1893, in Rosenheim-Germany, and died on October 15, 1946, in Nürnberg. Goering was a highly influential Nazi leader, politician, World War One (WW1) fighter ace and became the second most powerful man in Germany under Hitler's Reign. He is also commonly believed to have started the Reichstag fire to give Hitler the opportunity to use the Enabling Act which then gave the Nazi party complete political control. In July of 1932, the National Socialist German Workers Party (NSDAP) party, or the NAZI party, won two hundred and thirty seats out of four hundred and ninety-one seats in the Reichstag and became the majority party, electing Goering as its president. Goering was already a prominent public figure for the Nazi party as he was widely respected for being one of the best fighter pilots in World War One. Goering went on to be the head of the German air force, or in German the Luftwaffe, in World War Two. He also became a collector of expensive art and other valuable items stolen from victims of the holocaust.

Hermann Goering grew up in a small castle near Nuremburg that was given to them by Hermann's Jewish godfather Dr. Hermann Epenstein, whom Goering's mother was having an affair with. This may have influenced Hermann's resentment towards Jewish people. Hermann was fascinated with war games and famous battles as a child and when he was sixteen, he was sent to a military academy from which he graduated with distinction.

Goering joined the 112th infantry division of the Prussian army in 1912. He then fell sick during World War One as a result of the living conditions in the trenches. While in hospital one of Goering's friends, Bruno Loezer, convinced him to apply for the German Air Combat Forces. Goering's initial application was not successful. However, in a display of his persistence and strong motivation, by late 1916 Goering had informally transferred himself into the Air Force and was eventually made official. He had become a hero amongst the German people. Hermann went on to score seventeen aerial victories and a number of medals. After hearing one of Adolf Hitler's speeches in 1922 Goering joined the Nazi party and became leader of Hitler's SA, Sturmabteilung or "storm detachment". Goering was injured in an attempt to seize power by force known as the Beer Hall Putsch, Goering was injured in the hip during this and became addicted to morphine in a hospital in Switzerland while in exile, this addiction would last the rest of his lifetime.

How does this relate to Goering?
Adolf Hitler's Nazi party was an extreme right party in Germany that wanted to create a prosperous and racially superior Germany. The Nazi party wanted to exterminate all other "sub species" of humans including the Jewish peoples, the Slavic peoples, people of colour and many others. The Nazi motivation was to create the Aryan master race, which by their definition was 'pure German' with the ultimate goal and motivation to rule the world. They had the goal of post WW1 re-unification of Germany and its peoples by whatever means they thought necessary. Goering and many other veterans joined the party as the party believed in the "stab in the back myth". This myth blamed the Jewish and Marxist politicians for surrendering and losing Germany the war, and believed the army was not to blame. One significant policy the party had viewed that the man's world and the woman's world were two separate things. Their view was the man's world being that of politics and labour and the women's world being that of her husband, her home and her children. The Nazi party planned to fix unemployment by taking women out of the workplace and replacing them with men. This had a significant impact on Nazi Germany's social structure and gender roles.

Surprisingly, this idea was popular and widely supported by women at the time as almost half of the NSDAP's votes were from women.

Prior to World War Two (WW2), as part of the continuing recovery from WW1, Hitler gave Goering full powers over the "Four-year plan" which meant that Goering now had full control over German industries, rearmament and its economic recovery. Hermann created the Reichswerke Hermann Göring company as part of this plan. This company used iron ore, considered to be uneconomical by other commercial companies, and produced steel to fill the need for large amounts of materials needed for rearmament and reconstruction. Goering was directly in charge of the rearmament of Germany after WW1 which was left unchecked and gave Germany the opportunity to re-arm and gain strength prior to WW2. The victors of WW1 neglected to consult with him nor try to slow him down. Even the British Prime Minister said: "After all the victors in the Great War except Britain disregarded their own disarmament pledges, the Führer abrogated the agreement which bound his own country, thus following the example of the nations who were responsible for the Versailles Treaty. It is today a commonly admitted part of Hitler's policy to develop an army strong enough to resist any attack". - How does this quote relate to Goering - make clear Goering effectively had control over the Airforce, police force and the entirety of the German economy during the four-year plan, and he prepared Hitler's Germany for total war both economically and militarily. Goering's motivation to help Germany recover and follow Hitler into war was out of a strong nationalism, he fought for his country in WW1 and felt betrayed when they lost the war. Hitler's motivation is much the same and this is why the two got along so well, because they both believed in a Germany free of those who betrayed them and a Germany that no one could challenge. Both men decided that the only way they could save their country from the national shame they perceived the Jews as being, was to physically eliminate the Jewish people from Germany.

It was Hermann Goering who (under Hitler's request) ordered Reinhard Heydrich, who was the chief of the Reich main security office, to submit a total solution to the Jewish question which would go on to be known as the final solution. Goering then ordered Reinhard to ensure the co-operation of leadership bodies in the implementation of the Final solution. Hermann Goering is directly linked to the implementation and undertaking of the mass genocide of six million innocent Jewish people. Goering's role in the Holocaust was to organise and order the execution of whomever opposed the Nazi party and anyone perceived as a threat.

During the Holocaust the Nazi regime conducted many different forms of human experimentation including freezing tests for the Luftwaffe that Goering was in command of. Subjects were dressed in different types of clothing including German fighter pilot uniforms and experimental Luftwaffe jackets and submerged into freezing water until they either died an agonizing death or passed out. The subjects who passed out were then resuscitated using new techniques or equipment, and then executed.

One of Goering's responsibilities of the Four-year plan was to confiscate property owned by Jews. By 1942 he had lost Hitler's good faith due to his failure to command the Luftwaffe adequately, the loss of the Battle of Britain and decline on the eastern and Western fronts. After losing Hitler's trust Goering became a recluse and mostly stayed on his estate amassing millions of dollars' worth of confiscated Jewish property. Some of this property is still being discovered today, and some may never be recovered.

In 1941 Hitler made Goering his official successor if Hitler died or lost his ability to govern. In the closing days of the war as defence of the city failed, Adolf Hitler declared that he intended to wait until the very end and then commit suicide. Goering arrived at one of his estates the same day and was notified of Hitler's intentions. Goering feared that if he requested permission from Hitler to take power he would be seen as a traitor but he also feared that his rival Martin Bormann would take power and execute him. Goering sent Hitler a telegram asking permission to act as Hitler's deputy and take control of Germany, Bormann intercepted this telegram and convinced Hitler that Goering was attempting to overthrow him. Hitler sent a reply ordering him to stand down from all offices or face arrest. In Hitler's Will he expelled Goering from the Nazi party and claimed that he had illegally attempted to seize power. On the sixth of May Goering surrendered himself to the United States Army and was taken into custody. - Why is this significant? 1

Hermann Goering had lost everything he devoted his life to, he had lost his fortune in stolen property, his fame and respect, his position of great power and his membership to the Nazi party. Goering was sentenced to hang at the Nuremburg trials for war crimes, conspiracy, waging a war of aggression and crimes against humanity, he was sentenced to death by hanging, he requested death by firing squad but it was refused. The night before his scheduled execution he committed suicide by ingesting cyanide that was smuggled in for him.

Hermann Goering had substantial influence in repairing the German economy and the rearmament of Germany in preparation for WW2. In my opinion, although his influence was positive for the German economy in the short term, his overall influence was very negative as a result of the horrific war crimes and massive destruction caused by WW2. I think he was motivated by his initial success as a pilot in WW1 and his sense of injustice at the restrictions imposed on Germany by the Treaty of Versailles. His resentment for the Jewish people, as he was influenced by the Nazi party and his own beliefs, ultimately led to the order that brought the final solution. Hermann's role in the Nazi party was to command the Luftwaffe and get the German economy and armed forces prepared for total war. He was in full command of the four-year plan that revived the German economy and re-armed the country. Goering abused his position in the Nazi party to take possession of priceless art and valuables from Jewish victims of the Holocaust and in the end he had amassed two hundred million dollars' worth of stolen property. Hermann Goering committed and took part in many terrible acts and was one of the men who ordered the mass genocide of millions of innocent men women and children. He did all this in the name of creating a better Germany but in the end was he too blinded by power and wealth to realise the monstrosities he was committing and the effect this would have on the world?
